

Recordings:

<https://cmu.zoom.us/rec/share/E3pL3Ppp4PXxhuLOIDHWfUeOwk1AilZQk90B9fIGe0NvoeFdmuA8t7J28jam-for.A0wqgD8cnLMbraz7?startTime=1648883314000>

(Passcode: 7n2Bjf$=)

<https://cmu.zoom.us/rec/share/E3pL3Ppp4PXxhuLOIDHWfUeOwk1AilZQk90B9fIGe0NvoeFdmuA8t7J28jam-for.A0wqgD8cnLMbraz7?startTime=1648882269000>

(Passcode: 7n2Bjf$=)

I didn't take too many notes since the interview was pretty straight forward. Everyone was able to do their tasks relatively quickly and no one was confused. Overall, everything went pretty smoothly. I would say that my design philosophy was successful as in allowing for quick and easy access to important information. Although my design philosophy accomplished its goal, I failed in other aspects. I focused too much on the ease of information gathering and did not focus enough on the theming and the aesthetics. If I had more time, I would definitely add more color. I didn't have enough time to tweak certain aspects of the website. I felt like the sizing was a little off too. The font was too simple and ordinary a reviewer told me. The whole website itself was too simple or at least too simple in colors. If I wanted to match the theme of the restaurant, I should definitely reflect that in the design. In general, I would change the colors and theming, fonts, and sizing of the cards. I feel like if I had more time, I would be able to fix these issues and gather more feedback and continue down the SDLC, but this would be my first iteration of the website and I think I did a pretty good job with it.